

Welcome to the Office of Professional Responsibility

The Nevada Department of Public Safety considers the professional conduct of its employees to be paramount. The DPS Office of Professional Responsibility (formerly known as Internal Affairs) is charged with investigation of complaints regarding an employee's conduct or our policies. A thorough, complete, objective investigation is conducted on all complaints.

If you desire to file a complaint against any employee of the DPS, you may contact the DPS offices in the local area, or contact DPS Headquarters in Carson City.

Once DPS Office of Professional Responsibility has received your complaint, an investigator will be assigned and you will be contacted to further clarify your concerns. The investigator will also provide further information regarding the DPS's complaint investigation process.

Complaints of a serious nature must be filed on the DPS Complaint Form (DO300) and must contain the signature of the complainant. You may download the DPS Complaint Acceptance Form (DO300) below.

The Department of Public Safety is proud of the quality of service we provide to the citizens of Nevada.

It is essential that all allegations of peace officer misconduct be thoroughly and objectively investigated to assure the public that misconduct will not be tolerated and, at the same time, vindicate officers who have been unjustly accused.

The authority and responsibility of these investigations within the Department of Public Safety are vested in the Divisions Chiefs.

Division Chiefs may defer to Office of Professional Responsibility for investigations involving employees of the Capitol Police, Division of Investigation, Highway Patrol, Parole and Probation, State Fire Marshall and Training Division.
